

April 20 th, 1930.

Dean Darnell,

I wish to express strongly the sentiment on the part of my department and myself in favor of the establishing of a separate reading room where psychological books and journals could be placed and where students could come to read them. We could profitably combine in this respect with the biology department as our references often overlap and our interests are often quite mutual.

Such a separate reading room would have a number of advantages, as has been set forth in the report which Dr. Creaser is submitting to you.

Very truly yours,

E. B. Skaggs.
